for tomorrow

Qualification overview

The Project Professional Qualification (PPQ), developed by APM, the chartered body for the project profession, draws on a candidates existing skills developed through experience, supported by their theory and study.

Covering the core and specific competences project professionals require across all areas of the profession, PPQ is the most comprehensive assessment of professional project management capability available.

Who is this qualification for?

The APM Project Professional Qualification is aimed at any project professional either:

- As a next step after taking the APM Project Management Qualification (PMQ).
- If they have around five-seven years experience as a project professional.
- If they want to step up to more difficult projects and demonstrate their readiness to do so.

It is possible to progress to PPQ without the PMQ. This can be identified through Provek's PMA assessment, an essential tool to help candidates objectively judge whether they are ready to undertake the APM PMQ.

How are candidates assessed?

The new syllabus covers three units:

- Effective leadership and management.
- Effective governance and control.
- Effective planning and control.

The PPQ tests the candidates skill and capability to perform in a specific environment. There are three parts to the assessment, comprising of:

- Scenario assessment (10 minutes preparation, 20 minute assessment).
- Oral exam (50 minutes).
- Project report (60 minutes).

"I believe achieving the PPQ will help build my professional status, demonstrate my capability as a project manager and my commitment to the profession."
